Description:

Young fans of the unflappable Sam-I-am will be pleased as punch to discover the plethora of flaps to lift in this 10-page board book version of the Dr. Seuss classic. Sam-I-am does his very best to convince a more finicky Seuss character to try this rather unusual delicacy. Would you? Could you? In a car?

Eat them! Eat them! Here they are.

You may like them. You will see.

You may like them in a tree!

To which the exasperated doubter replies: I would not, could not, in a tree.

Not in a car!

You let me be.

On every page readers will find sturdy, easy-to-lift flaps behind which reside the familiar characters and lines of the unique 1960 classic--except for the last page. Here, blank spaces lurk behind the flaps, just waiting to be filled in with peel-off pictures from the accompanying sheet of silly stickers. Green eggs and ham; You may be able to have them in a box and with a fox, but can you make them at home? Yes, you can! With a clever bit of kitchen chemistry you can easily make your own green eggs, without any food colouring! The secret lies in a special pigment found in ordinary red cabbage, when cabbage juice is introduced to the alkaline egg whites the change in the pH causes the purple juice to turn a greenish-blue colour, it's completely harmless and produces a neat effect. To make your own green eggs pour a small amount of the red cabbage juice into your bowl of egg white and gently whisk together, you should see a colour change almost immediately. Add Tip. Ask Question. Green Eggs & Ham looks like it has the best of both worlds with cutting-edge computer animation and a personal touch thanks to the artists at work on every frame. Nov 8, 2019 | Full Review | Dave Trumbore. Collider. Netflix's Green Eggs and Ham is well worth the watch, especially if you're watching with kids. Most importantly, this series is beyond faithful to the work of Dr. Seuss, and that's probably the best compliment I could give it. Nov 5, 2019 | Rating: 4/5 | Full Review | Green Eggs and Ham is the second Dr. Seuss Living Book Adaptation from Broderbund. The story features Sam-I-Am, who repeatedly asks the questions based on an object, e.g. "Would you Could you on a boat?". This leads to his grumpy friend saying "I do not like Green Eggs an Ham". The story gets more dramatic as it progresses. There are some activities featuring characters from the story like the Fox in a Box, and the Mouse in the House. The game features word recognition, vocabulary, reading comprehension and computer literacy. Every page is clickable for a few surprises. In Read to Me, the prog

Dr. Seuss' editor, Bennett Cerf, bet him that he couldn't write a book using only 50 words. This was no small feat because, by comparison, the relatively simple Cat in the Hat had used about 225. A description of tropes appearing in Green Eggs and Ham. Dr. Seuss does it again, putting a tiny collection of words to amazing use. He manages this with a !
