Pages: 151

Volumes: 1

Condition: Good

Jacket Condition: Good

Binding: Hardcover

Description: This volume continues a major series of books featuring the activities of the Royal Navy at its various bases, both at home and abroad throughout the last century. There has been much change for the Royal Navy and the Dockyard since 1900. It has been full of strife at times but during that period the best traditions of the port and the region have been maintained, i am proud to have been present and shared that experience. and hope that my children and grandchildren will see it continued through the 21st century. May the traditional port division cry Oggie, Oggie, Oggie, continue to echo down through the ages.

Battleship At War

Author: CDR B. R. Coward RN

Publisher: Ian Allan Ltd

Edition:

Book Size: 290mm x 220mm

Pages: 128

Volumes: 1

Condition: Good

Jacket Condition: Fair

Binding: Hardcover

Description: In common with other books in the at war series the aim of Battleship at war is to describe what it was like to be there. Through the illuminating accounts of midshipmen, signalmen and engineers, gunnery ratings and stories clerks, CDR Coward paints a vivid picture of life on board battleships during both world wars, as well as the later Korean and Vietnamese conflicts. Supported by over 200 carefully selected photographs, many previously unpublished, Battleships at war puts the reader in an imaginary position on the bridge or in the gun turrets at such famous naval actions as Dogger bank, the river plate and North Cape, together with a fascinating insight into life above and below deck.

Publisher: Queen Anne press

Edition: 1st Edition

Book Size: 235mm x 155mm

Pages: 255

Volumes: 1

Condition: Very Good

Jacket Condition: Good

Binding: Hardcover

Description: The rise and fall of the British Navy is an eloquent indictment of successive government neglect of the senior service since 1945. Indeed, it was arguably the withdrawal of the ice patrol ship Endurance from the South Atlantic that encouraged an Argentine dictatorship in 1982 of an easy occupation of the Falklands. This was not an isolated instance of British judgement, the closure of Chatham dockyards, where only recently millions had been spent on equipment for servicing nuclear submarines, has been succeeded by their reconstruction at Devonport.

Author: George Malcolm Thomson

Publisher: Book club associates

Edition:

Book Size: 235mm x 155mm

Pages: 288

Volumes:

Condition: Fair

Jacket Condition: Fair

Binding: Hardcover

Description: End pages are slightly dirty. The vision was clear, a trading route across the top of the world, a shipping lane North of America to the fabulous riches of Cathay. The way was unknown, unmapped, and its defences were formidable. But for centuries men were to argue, to search, to suffer and to die in the attempt to trace this route that was known only as an idea, a mythology a potent name the North West passage. The search led them into unsuspected terrors, into seas and lands of a hostility beyond belief. Seas in which mountains of ice swung irresistibly shores where towering cliffs of ice could entomb men and ships in their sudden thunderous collapse, lands so barren that it seemed nothing could endure but perpetual ice itself. But men did endure. Slowly and at hideous cost they mapped out the contours of the lands where, for years at a time, land and sea were inextricably sunk beneath the continuous sheet of blinding ice that defended the prize.

Publisher: Thomas Reed publication

Edition: 3rd Edition

Book Size: 160mm x 100mm

Pages: 170

Volumes: 1

Condition: As New

Jacket Condition:

Binding: Soft cover

Description: Reeds Skippers Handbook is an aide memoire for all those who go to sea for pleasure. The next best thing to knowing something is knowing where to find out about it. This pocket size volume will provide the answer to most of the navigation problems that are likely to arise during a coastal passage. This third edition has an extra 32 pages of important information making it even better value. Ideal for coastal skipper and yachtmaster courses too. The Skippers handbook is of pocket size and stands up well to its self professed purpose as a sailors aide memoire. It picks its way through such subjects as basic chartwork, tides, rules of the road, buoyage, meteorology, the use of a sextant for non celestial navigation and much else besides and the short section on weather is one of the best summaries of this fundamentally mysterious subjects.

Description: Dust Jacket is badly torn. Fep has staining. Here in the set of the sails is another great book. There were four masted barquees and full rigged ships moored within sight of the house in Melbourne where Alan Villiers was born. From earliest youth, he was determined not only to sail in them but to command one. When he was fifteen he shipped as a cadet in the Tasman sea barque Rothsay bay, an ancient Scot in the New Zealand timber trade. For the next quarter of a century he wandered the seven seas in sailing ships, Whaling ships, Arab Ddows.

Description: John Harrison was no ordinary clock or watch maker, he served no apprenticeship, and all his timekeepers were entirely different from those produced by the orthodox craftsmen of his day. He was born in 1693 and was brought up as a carpenter in the small Lincolnshire village of Barrow on the South bank of the humber, a part of England that even today is extremely isolated and unfrequented. Yet he spent the first 37 years of his life there, and it was in Barrow that he evolved many of his most brilliant and original ideas for precision timekeeping.
