How to write a research paper introduction. Published on September 24, 2020 by Jack Caulfield. Revised on November 19, 2020. The introduction to a research paper is where you set up your topic and approach for the reader. It has several key goals: Present your topic and get the reader interested. For a paper describing original research, you instead provide an overview of the most relevant research that has already been conducted. This is a sort of miniature literature review—a sketch of the current state of research into your topic, boiled down to a few sentences. This should be informed by genuine engagement with the literature. The ultimate guide to writing perfect research papers, essays, dissertations or even a thesis — Structure your work effectively — to impress your readers. How to start a research paper? Choose a research paper topic that interests and challenges you the most. Your attitude towards the topic may well determine amount of effort, enthusiasm you put into your research. Focus on a limited aspect, narrow it down from "Religion" to "World Religion" to "Buddhism." Obtain teacher approval for your theme idea and thesis before making full-scale research. You cannot make a finally formulated statement before you have completed your research paper. It naturally change while you develop your ideas. Stay away from generic, too fuzzy statements and arguments. A research paper is a presentation of findings after you have investigated a topic. How do you conduct the investigation? You do this by accumulating primary and secondary sources. Relevant sources must be evaluated, and here is where you need to use your critical thinking skills. Purpose of Research Paper. Purpose of Research Paper is to interpret material and offer a unique perspective, solution, or answer: Suggesting how an issue or process can be improved. Highlighting both the strengths and weaknesses of material.
