The people of Israel are more numerous and mightier than we are.+ 10 Let us deal shrewdly with them. Otherwise, they will continue to multiply, and if a war breaks out, they will join our enemies and fight against us and leave the country." 11 So they appointed chiefs of forced labor* over them to oppress them with hard labor,+ and they built storage cities for Phar'ao, namely, Pi'thom and Ra'am'ses.+ Exodus - A Simple Exposition. Prefatory. THE following chapters are very simple and purely expository. In dealing with the Tabernacle and its sacred vessels, the subject might have been made more attractive if embellished with illustrations. Now another figure appears on the scene "a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph" (v.8). The statement that he "knew not Joseph" is exceedingly significant. Joseph in Egypt was a type of Christ in His earthly glory and consequently not to know him is characteristic of a moral state. THIS chapter, full of interest, is made more attractive to the spiritual mind by the divine commentary which is given in Hebrews 11 upon its main incidents.
