Strategic Management starts with firms exploring how they would gain advantages over their rivals that are unique and place them at a better pedestal than their rivals. This is what competitive advantage is all about and this article discusses some aspects of how firms need to gain and sustain competitive advantage. We have defined what competitive advantage is as it relates to strategic management and the sources of competitive advantage differing from firm to firm. However, a firm can have a source of competitive advantage for only a certain period because the rival firms imitate and copy the successful firms' strategies leading to the original firm losing its source of competitive advantage over the longer term.
