The past hundred years for Germany and the Germansâ€”a mere blip in the sweep of historyâ€”have been exceptional. The fall of the Berlin Wall in November 1989 was a stunning historical event.Â Far-Right Ideology. Franz Josef Strauss, the legendary leader of the conservative Christian Social Union (CSU), the Bavarian sister party of the Christian Democrats, used to say, â€œTo the right of us is the wall.â€ In other words, Strauss would allow no room for right-wing antics outside his control: the CSU would absorb and endeavor to manage all the unsavory temptations floating around in conservative space and circles.Â The party fares strongest in eastern Germany; yet some of AfDâ€™s hardest ideological voices come from western Germany. The party is frequently labeled â€œfar-right.â€ Berlin authorities have banned the upcoming protest against Covid-19 lockdown measures, saying the marches were being misused as a stage for right-wing extremists and â€œdeniersâ€ of the pandemic.Â Germanyâ€™s Robert Koch Institute has reported a rise in Covid-19 cases in recent weeks, with over 1,500 new infections over the past 24 hours, 66 of them in Berlin. The capital has had almost 11,000 cases and 225 deaths since the outbreak, while Germany as a whole has reported over 236,000 cases and more than 9,200 deaths. Right-wing militia groups say they patrol where police turn a blind eye. The far-right Alternative for Germany party, or AfD, has tried to exploit the pandemic in the same way it used the refugee crisis in 2015, when the government accepted more than one million migrants into the country, to feed a narrative of impending crisis and government failure. The migrant wave helped propel the AfD into Parliament in the last election, but the issue has lost much of its political potency, as the resettlement has been broadly deemed a success. "In Germany, like many other European countries, we see that far-right parties are losing ground, that there is growing trust in incumbent governments," Mr. Quent said. "In the short term the pandemic can't be exploited by far-right parties." If the economy deteriorates further and unemployment rises, that equation may change, he said.
