Lock Step is one of four scenarios for the future of technology and international development, which the Rockefeller Foundation and Global Business Network (GBN) came up with in 2010 after a year of work by a large team. GBN is described by its founder, the US-American futurist Peter Schwartz as a "high level networking and corporate research agency". The Rockefeller Foundation funded the establishment of the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health in 1916, which, "was the first of its kind in the United States and became enormously influential in the field." The Rockefeller-report with the Lock-Step-scenario seems to be addressed to decision makers at large, powerful foundations like the Rockefeller Foundation itself or the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.
